This event is part of a series of thematic events on the decarbonization of society within the framework of the Roadmap to Carbon Neutrality 2050. The event will focus on issues of social transition surrounding the output of the carbon neutrality roadmap. The work being developed in the context of the RNC2050 and the relevance of the just transition theme for the RNC will also be presented at the event.

Portugal has committed to being carbon neutral by 2050. Reaching net-zero carbon emissions will present both a significant opportunity and an enormous challenge – both economically and socially - as a successful transition will require close between policy, technology and capital, as well as an effective engagement of both public and private sector.

This session will explore the value of, and potential for, building a coalition of nations and non-state actors committed to the development of cooperative arrangements under Article 6 of the Paris Agreement to enhance ambition through NCS partnerships (including on REDD+) and to developing best practices for doing so. The Global Platform for the New York Declaration on Forests (NYDF) is interested in advancing such multi-stakeholder initiatives at the UN Secretary General's Climate Summit in September 2019. The NYDF is a partnership of governments, multinational companies, civil society and indigenous peoples who strive to halt deforestation by 2020 and to end it by 2030.

Hosted by Peter Graham Managing Director Climate Advisers
In Collaboration with Simon Henry Director, Carbon Market Development International Emissions Trading Association (IETA)

challenges would need to be addressed to link it to the EU ETS? A development such as this would be unprecedented for the world’s largest carbon market, which has only ever seen new countries join. Depending on the outcome of Brexit, the UK may leave the EU ETS and implement a carbon tax, or create its own domestic carbon market which could link back to another national cap-and-trade system. Meanwhile, 2018 saw announcements between the EU and California, China and New Zealand on closer carbon market cooperation. This session will explore the possibility for more linkages to the EU ETS in the future, and the benefits this could bring.

The European carbon market is on track to link to the Swiss ETS in early 2020, which will constitute the first link between the world’s largest carbon market and another national cap-and-trade system. Meanwhile, 2018 saw announcements between the EU and California, China and New Zealand on closer carbon market cooperation. This session will explore the possibility for more linkages to the EU ETS in the future, and the benefits this could bring.

The adoption of the Paris Rulebook at COP24 in Katowice was a clear milestone for international climate action, but guidance for market cooperation (Article 6) under the Agreement was left out from the Rulebook and is now due for completion by COP25 in Santiago. This plenary will discuss the outcomes of COP24 and focus on what is needed to take Article 6 over the finish line in Santiago, analysing the way forward for markets.

What are the Prospects for Future Links to the EU ETS? The European carbon market is on track to link to the Swiss ETS in early 2020, which will constitute the first link between the world’s largest carbon market and another national cap-and-trade system. Meanwhile, 2018 saw announcements between the EU and California, China and New Zealand on closer carbon market cooperation. This session will explore the possibility for more linkages to the EU ETS in the future, and the benefits this could bring.

Depending on the outcome of Brexit, the UK may leave the EU ETS and implement a carbon tax, or create its own domestic carbon market which could link back to the EU system. Such a development would be unprecedented for the world’s largest carbon market, which has only ever seen new countries join. Important questions will need to be addressed such as what impact this would have on UK emissions, could a domestic UK carbon market be established in time and what challenges would need to be addressed to link it to the EU ETS?
Despite the recovery of European carbon prices and the reinvigoration of the market, some Member States are pursuing domestic measures—such as carbon price floors and coal phase-outs—to speed up the rate of decarbonization. These developments, along with higher European renewables and energy efficiency targets agreed in 2018, could destabilise the supply-demand balance in the EU ETS. This session will contrast the approach Europe is taking to address this problem, with the approaches being used in other jurisdictions such as the USA and China.

Creating Vibrant Carbon Markets to Scale Voluntary and Compliance Climate Action

There is great momentum in the private sector to move towards net-zero emissions in support of global climate action. Carbon credits have an important role to play in delivering more ambition. This session will explore ways in which offsetting currently intersects and blends with compliance and voluntary frameworks around the world. From pure voluntary action, through voluntary action combined with compliance, through to full compliance at scale, resilient markets have the power to unlock potential and maximize mitigation.

Climate Risk: How can Financial Markets be Aligned with Climate Targets?

Climate change presents a major risk to all sectors of the economy. A raft of initiatives, such as the TCFD, have been launched to ensure that this growing risk is accurately reflected in financial markets and capital flow. Alongside these initiatives, funds have been set up to use EU ETS revenues to drive low carbon innovation and not just modernisation in lower income Member States. This session will look at how climate risk can be measured and how abatement technologies can be funded.

As many regions progress with increasingly ambitious carbon pricing policies, the contrast with those regions that have no or minimal carbon pricing, becomes increasingly stark. This presents a real challenge for policy makers who are trying to maintain a level economic playing field and safeguard competitiveness. This session will explore what tools are currently being used to address this challenge, and what solutions might be implemented in the future as carbon prices continue to rise.

How can the EU ETS Support Higher Ambition by 2050?

In 2018 the EU published its long term carbon reduction strategy, which sets out pathways to achieving carbon neutrality by 2050 with negative emissions elsewhere, and limiting warming to 1.5°C. Under the Paris Agreement, the EU will also need to communicate or update its NDC by early 2020. This session will discuss whether the EU’s 2030 targets might be tightened, what this could mean for the EU ETS, and how the carbon market can help deliver a carbon neutral continent by 2050.
